My name is Rachel Suss and I am the Communications Officer for the Public Health Coalition, and we are running a mentorship program where we pair undergraduates interested in public health with graduate students in the School of Public Health, across all departments. This is a great way for students to learn all about the many paths to and within public health. We have many graduate students eager to participate in the program, and I was wondering if it would be possible to include this opportunity in the Health Professions weekly email in order to get the word out to undergraduate students. Interested students just need to fill out this short google form- https://forms.gle/BJ4xcVuz9etCGJcQ9 by November 22nd.
