VAW is a medical outreach program that is devoted to improving the standard of living for those that live in poverty stricken communities of the world. While abroad for the two-week program during spring break, volunteers will travel to Bocas del Toro in Panama to assist doctors by measuring vital statistics, operating a pharmacy, shadowing doctors, teaching public health programs, and helping to ensure a successful clinic experience for the patients. This is a great opportunity to get clinical experience, as well as to learn and practice Spanish. But you definitely do NOT need experience in either of these to join!

Contact sarah.a.lee@yale.edu if you have any questions, and be sure to find us on facebook at https://www.facebook.com/yaleVAW/